

Abstract

The invention is a novel sputter deposition process for thin film phosphors that provide high luminance and colors required for TV applications.